

I strongly support satellite radio being able to carry local content. Being able to follow weather and traffic conditions is extremely important to us when our family is on the road.

Also, since many local stations are now owned by distant companies and often automated, I don't understand what the concern is. We also benefit from truly local broadcasting and often switch between satellite and local -- so, what's the problem?

This sounds like unnecessary legislation and expense to me. Worse ... it sounds like it would compromise services for which I pay, very much appreciate and from which I benefit.

Please do not waste your time or our nation's funds on compromising constructive free enterprise. Thank you.
